

Customer and provider privacy notices

Two notices for separate collection points | Original draft for review

Publication instruction

This file contains two audience-specific draft notices. Publish the relevant section at each collection point. Confirm the factual processing inventory, retention periods and suppliers first. These are proposed disclosures, not a certification of current controls. Controller: [LEGAL ENTITY AND ADDRESS]. Privacy contact: [EMAIL/POSTAL ADDRESS]. Version/effective date: [APPROVED VERSION/DATE].

A. Customer privacy notice - information and purposes

Homlle uses account and contact details, booking addresses, service instructions, booking/payment references, support messages and relevant complaint records to arrange and manage services. We receive information from you, people authorised to book for you, the assigned provider and payment/service suppliers. We should collect only relevant service evidence, not unrelated information visible in a home.

Proposed lawful basis mapping: account, booking and service communication necessary to perform the customer contract; accounting and legally required records for identified legal obligations; proportionate fraud prevention, service quality and security for documented legitimate interests, balanced against your rights. Optional marketing and non-essential tracking require the appropriate separate permission where applicable. Homlle must complete the mapping before publication and identify the exact legal obligations relied upon.

For beauty appointments, relevant consultation information may include health or allergy information. Homlle must identify both an ordinary lawful basis and an applicable special-category condition before collecting it. Where explicit consent is relied upon, request it separately and explain withdrawal and the consequences for safely providing the treatment. Do not collect broad medical histories simply because a form has space for them.

A. Customer sharing, photographs and choices

Only the assigned/authorised provider should receive the details needed to deliver the booking. Payment providers process payment credentials under their applicable roles and notices. Homlle may use hosting, communications, support and professional advisers under appropriate arrangements. Complete the named supplier and transfer schedule below; do not publish an empty schedule.

Booking evidence is for service delivery and complaint handling. Marketing photographs require a separate, optional permission specifying the use. Refusing promotional photography does not remove service rights. Do not include people, identity documents, bank papers or unrelated personal items in completion photographs. Where appropriate, offer another means of documenting completion.

Providing information essential for a booking is necessary to arrange that service; optional information is not a condition of access. You can change marketing preferences and request correction of inaccurate details. Service messages needed to fulfil a booking are separate from advertising.

B. Applicant and provider privacy notice - information and purposes

Homlle uses contact and business details, service skills, work areas, equipment, employment/experience information, emergency contacts, relevant identity/eligibility documents, insurance and qualification records to assess and manage an application. It may also keep training, agreement acceptance, booking, performance, payout-reference and support records for approved providers. Tell emergency contacts how their details will be used; collect no more than necessary.

Information comes from you, verification/payment services, authorised references, booking customers and operational records. State which fields are mandatory and why. Homlle must not describe an uploaded credential as verified before a reviewer or configured verification process reaches that decision.

Proposed lawful bases: taking requested steps towards a provider contract and administering it; specific legal obligations where applicable; documented legitimate interests for proportionate quality, fraud and safety controls. Do not use general consent as a substitute for necessary contractual processing. Criminal-offence data needs an additional lawful authorisation/condition and appropriate safeguards; a standard contract clause or simple consent checkbox is not automatically sufficient.

B. Performance and banking

If introduced, weekly ranking uses defined work and review evidence. Explain categories, weights, sample requirements and material consequences, including job-offer priority. Provide access to relevant evidence, correction and human challenge. Before using automated decisions with significant effects, assess the applicable legal requirements and implement appropriate safeguards. Do not advertise this as a fully operational automated system while it remains proposed.

Banking credentials should be supplied through the approved payment provider's secure process. Homlle's notice must accurately identify any payout status, account references or documents it receives. Do not claim that Homlle receives no financial information if invoice uploads or references are retained. ID and eligibility evidence must be restricted to authorised reviewers, not exposed on a public profile.

Profile display and changes to this notice

A public provider profile may show the approved portrait, service description and published review information, with advance explanation of what will be visible. Do not publish raw identity or vetting documents. Confirm the lawful basis and visibility controls for the actual profile. Homlle will update this notice before introducing materially different purposes and give appropriate notice; where new permission is required, obtain it separately.

Common notice - retention and transfers

Retain information for an identified purpose, with a documented deletion or review trigger. OWNER DECISION: publish actual periods or sufficiently clear criteria for application evidence, unsuccessful applications, contracts, accounting records, booking photos, support messages, security logs and verified-check records. Distinguish a record that a check occurred from a full copy of the evidence. Do not retain all identity documents for the same period as tax records by default.

If information is accessed or stored outside the UK, identify the countries/recipients, legal transfer mechanism and how a copy of safeguards can be obtained. Do not state all data stays in the UK without verifying hosting, support, backups and supplier access. Security measures must be appropriate to the risks; no online service can promise absolute security.

Common notice - your rights and complaints

Depending on the processing and applicable law, you may request access, correction, erasure, restriction, portability or object to processing. Where consent is used, you can withdraw it without affecting earlier lawful use. Some records may need to be retained for a lawful obligation or claim; we will explain relevant limits. Contact [PRIVACY CONTACT]. We may proportionately verify identity before disclosing information.

You can complain to Homlle about data handling and escalate to the Information Commissioner's Office at <https://ico.org.uk/make-a-complaint/>. Homlle must maintain a working internal complaint process. The right of access normally requires a response without undue delay and within one month; lawful extensions or pauses must be assessed and explained rather than assumed.
